Both Men, Along With Two Others, Blamed for Attempted Hold Up Here

Two more men alleged to have been connected with the attempted hold-up and robbery of the Farmers National Bank here and the robbery of the Chalfont National Bank at Chalfont have been brought back to Bucks County and lodged in the Bucks County jail at Doylestown.

The men are:

Wilbur Rae Creveling, 26, and Thomas Patrick Culliney, both of Philadelphia.

Creveling on Saturday was released from the Philadelphia County Jail at Holmesburg, after serving a sentence for a hold-up in Philadelphia. A detainee had been lodged against him and Saturday Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo placed him under arrest and took him to Doylestown.

Culliney on Wednesday was taken from the Eastern Penitentiary where he had been serving a sentence of from 18 months to three years. The prisoner upon his release from the penitentiary was re-arrested and taken by Detective Russo and Constable Charles P. Alta to Doylestown.

It is presumed that the two men will stand trial at the next term of criminal court.

Two others completing the quartette are now serving time. They are Alfred Rumford, who is serving 15 to 20 years and Edward Bates, who is doing a stretch of from 8 to 16 years. These two were convicted in Bucks County courts for their part in the affair.

The Chalfont National Bank was robbed on March 13, 1931, by the four and $2840 stolen. The Farmers National Bank, here, was held up on May 7, 1931, but no money was stolen, the bandits being chased away amid pistol fire and the sounding of burglar alarm.

Mrs. J. Y. Huber Speaks
To Members of Sorosis

LANGHORNE, Oct. 2.—A large number of members attended the initial meeting of the Langhorne Sorosis season, conducted yesterday afternoon in the library building. Mrs. Paul Benesch presided.

A business meeting, replete with plans for future events, was followed by an address by Mrs. John Y. Huber, Haverford president of the Merion Branch of the Republican Women of Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Huber, confining her remarks to the needs of the country at large rather than to politics, stated that women as a whole need to be better informed. The necessity of women voting was stressed, and the general indifference to affairs of the nation on the part of many was scored. The legislation committee, of which Mrs. Maury Jones is chairman, was in charge of the day's program.

Music for the afternoon, which included club singing, was led by the new chairman of music, Mrs. Harry Friedrich.

During the business session Mrs. Harry Williams, Jr., reported the meetings of the Southeastern District of Pennsylvania Federation of Women's Clubs, held at Perkasie. Standing committees also reported.

Plans are being made for the 40th anniversary of Sorosis on October 13, at which time the past presidents will present a program. A covered dish luncheon will also feature, this function taking place at the library. The first meeting of the book club will be October 6th at the home of Mrs. Ernest Harvey. On the 26th of this month the art section members will participate in a trip to the Academy of Natural Science, Philadelphia.

Birthday of Child Marked
By A Very Jolly Party

A birthday party was given in honor of Rosemary Gorman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gorman, Pond street, Saturday, who celebrated her fourth anniversary.

Tells of Interview With

Great Spanish Officer

ONLY ONE WOUNDED

(Note: Following is the 16th of the war logs sent from the Spanish battlefield by H. R. Knickerbocker, famous roving correspondent of International News Service.)

EL PUENTE DEL ARZOBISPO, Oct. 2.—(INS)—After watching his Moroccan capture the hamlet of Alcolea de Tajo, we went to the headquarters of Lieut. Colonel Asensio, chief of the first column of Lieut. Colonel Yague operating against Madrid, to give him the full title he wrote out for us in the darkened room of his temporary resting place after thirty-six hours of marching and fighting.

Lieutenant Colonel Asensio is in command of one tabor of Moroccans and one bandera of the Legion, one battery and two armored cars, including that forest green Wasp which swept down the street of Trujillo and blasted us with its siren out of our hotel room.

He was asleep when we arrived at the front door of the modest village house where he had taken his billet for the day, but he immediately sent word for us to come in when we sent him our card. It was still daylight so he had closed all the blinds. He opened one a quarter way, and in the half-light we sat and talked.

"We only had one wounded when we took this place," the Lt. Col. said, handing us cigarettes. We passed the light around but the Colonel blew it out at the third. This old war custom is absolutely universal in the Legion and if you want completely to alienate a Legionnaire try to light a third cigarette from the same match.

The Lieutenant Colonel was tall, gray-haired, lean and hard-bitten and most cordial.

"We took the place this morning about ten o'clock," he said. "First we came within two or three kilometers before the enemy began firing. Then we got on those hills out there where you see the Regulars, and shelled the town."

From the church tower I had seen the collapsed roofs of several buildings, evidently hit by shells.

"Some of the Reds escaped to Talavera," the Lieutenant Colonel went on, "while others mined that bridge you see out there, but they ran away before they set off the explosives. We found ten boxes of dynamite and TNT underneath the bridge when we got there. The Reds had also stretched a high tension electric wire across the bridge. I don't know what they did that for. It was still charged when we reached it, but of course it was no trouble to cut."

Many Have Enrolled
In Dancing Academy

Almost double the enrollment of last season is reported by the Gran-zow Academy of Dancing in Croydon. The Academy, which opened on September 12, has been modernized in many respects since last year, one of the biggest changes being an entirely new hardwood floor. The class room has also been papered and painted and the proprietors expect to triple the last year's enrollment before the end of the month.

Announcement has also been made that the social classes in dancing will begin about the middle of October. In this phase of training, as well as in the more technical phases, the modern trend of dancing is being taught here.

One of the significant changes this season is the large increase in students in the toe dancing class. This is due, in part, to the fact that this school is the only one in this section that teaches this type of dancing.

Acrobatics, taps, and the dance technique of dancing is taught in all of the general classes, the directors stated.

SMITH COMES OUT FOR LONDON; HITS
NEW DEAL RECORD; SAYS ROOSEVELT
FAILED TO KEEP PLATFORM PLEDGESSees Election of Republican President Remedy For All of The Country's Ills — Charges Roosevelt Fooled Own
Party — Denies He Has Any Grudge — Says Roosevelt
Regime is Not Democratic Administration.

By International News Service

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.—Alfred E. Smith, former Democratic presidential candidate and once a political ally of President Roosevelt, was squarely on record today in support of the presidential candidacy of Governor Alfred M. Landon.

That the President and Smith had come to the meeting of the political ways had been well-known, but this was the first time that the former Governor of New York state had publicly endorsed the Republican candidate for the Presidency and declared his intention to campaign for him.

Speaking before an audience of 3,000 at Carnegie Hall, here, Smith denounced the New Deal as a "dark and dismal failure," and asserted that the election of Governor Landon to the White House "is the remedy for all the ills we are suffering from today."

Smith's speech was broadcast by radio, following immediately upon President Roosevelt's broadcast speech from Pittsburgh.

In endorsing Landon, Smith declared that he did so "not as a party man, but as an American."

"If the Democratic party," he said, "had lived up to its program of pledges made in 1932 and if President Roosevelt had kept his own promises, I would not be speaking from this platform. But I am an American before I am a Democrat—or a Republican either."

In attacking the President, Smith said that "one of the chief characteristics of the New Deal is to heap abuse on anyone disagreeing with it—a tendency dangerous to democracy."

Smith said:

"General Johnson is supporting the New Deal," he said, "but immediately after the President's report on the state of the nation this is what he said about it: 'A rabble rouser . . . this makes him chief of the factions of discontent.' I'll take the general's explanation."

"In January last I made a speech in Washington . . . it was couched in general terms. I was specific in what I said and I invited criticism in the event that I might be wrong in the light of the record. I took the Democratic platform plank by plank and I read it to the assembled guests. I was right or I was wrong.

"If I was wrong, it was easy for somebody in the New Deal to contradict me. Did anybody do that? No, but one of the leaders of the Administration made a speech and what he said was:

"'Al has gone high hat.' That's a perfectly good excuse for disregarding the promise given to the party in 1932. I have a high hat. So has every other man who goes to a wedding or a funeral. But I also have a brown derby. . . .

"An' listen, I grew up to the derby from no hat, I didn't try to reach down and get.

"And the sidewalks of New York are still in existence, although during the convention in Philadelphia word came to the bandmaster not to play 'The Sidewalks of New York' any more. That's a Democratic song. That's the song that recognizes the existence of Mamie O'Rourke and in its place was substituted the New Deal anthem, 'Happy Days.'

"And another powerful reason against my Washington speech was my business associates. In the true sense of the word I have no business associates. I am a salaried man. I've never been anything else, I'm working for a salary. And there ain't any difference between me and any other salaried worker.

"When I came from Albany I had no profession or early education to equip me for one. And I had no rich uncle or rich aunt. And outside of the time I spent in the executive mansion in Albany I spent my whole life on the waterfront of New York. And I couldn't be a good sailor because I get seasick too easy.

"Of course I met men of means. But I didn't have to come down to New York to meet them. I could have met them in Albany. And they are only paying me what I am worth.

"But in the meantime the American businessman is certainly having a sweet time of it getting kicked all around the lot. Now the President is speaking in Syracuse at the State convention. And he spoke about the record at Albany. He's right. I battled as

N. J., Meets With Accident
While On Visit Here

WAS TAKING A WALK

An aged Italian man, Joseph Tranotti, 78, Passaic, N. J., was instantly killed last night when struck by a truck. The accident occurred on the Bristol Pike, just a short distance over the Bristol Borough line, near the entrance to the Rohm & Haas chemical plant. Tranotti was taken to the Harriman Hospital, but was pronounced dead upon being admitted to the institution.

Tranotti came to Bristol Wednesday evening to visit his son, N. Tranotti, Jefferson avenue and Chestnut street. During yesterday afternoon Tranotti went out for a walk and stopped and chatted with a number of his acquaintances. It is presumed that he then decided to take a walk, and evidently went down the Bristol Pike.

The driver of the truck, Harvey Andrews, Keyport, N. J., said that he did not see the man until he was nearly upon him, and that then Tranotti seemed to suddenly stop.

Andrews was taken into custody by Highway Patrolman Desch. Andrews was given a hearing before Justice of Peace James Guy, and held in $2000 bail to await the action of the coroner. Deputy Coroner Dr. James Lawler investigated.

Tranotti is survived by four sons and three daughters.

The accident occurred shortly before seven o'clock.

TIDES AT BRISTOL

Low water 10.37 a. m.; 11.08 p. m.

TULLYTOWN, Oct. 2.—A young man and his woman companion were held up and robbed on the Bristol Pike near here last night when three armed bandits stopped their car.

William J. Mullen, Jr., son of Detective Sergeant William J. Mullen, 1115 Park avenue, Trenton, N. J., was the victim. The name of the woman was not revealed.

The men, who wore masks over their faces, stopped the automobile driven by Mullen and ordered him and the young woman to get out. After relieving them of their money and valuables, the bandits jumped into the Mullen car and hurried away.

Besides his auto, Mullen lost his top coat, wallet, wrist watch, service revolver, college ring and office keys. The young woman's diamond ring and sum of money were taken.

Mullen and his companion walked to a house some distance away and telephoned the report of the robbery to the Pennsylvania Highway Patrol sub-station at Oxford Valley and troopers began a search for the men.

Mullen's car, a sedan, bears license No. L-22292.

The men are described as being white and according to the report drove off in the direction of Trenton in Mullen's car. The robbery occurred at about 9.45 p. m.

One man is reported to have been about five feet and seven inches in height, one was five feet and nine inches tall, while the third was five feet and eleven inches. One man wore a white mask and the other two wore black masks.

Rotary and Exchange
Meet in Joint Session

About 50 Bristol Rotarians and Exchange club members met in joint session last evening at the Elks' Home. Talks on scouting activities were heard and these were followed by the featured speaker of the evening, Dr. H. Sherman Oberly, professor of psychology and associate director of admissions at the University of Pennsylvania, who showed three reels of motion pictures and gave an address on his visit to the bush country of Liberia, on the West Coast of Africa.

Dr. Oberly related many of his experiences of the visit which he made with his brother, a missionary, and his nine-year-old daughter to that country in 1934. He told of his experiences with the tribal rituals and the devil dancers of Africa.

The trip for Dr. Oberly was a vacation as well as an opportunity to study the psychological reactions of the natives to certain tests which he devised. It is believed that Dr. Oberly's work with these natives represents the first attempt to record any of their psychological reactions.

His observations at the end of his trip were very interesting. Dr. Oberly concludes that the natives, if given the same opportunity as civilized white men, would make just as good a showing. "The native blacks are very intelligent in their own manner," Dr. Oberly pointed out. "And when a native of low intelligence appears he is sent out into the bush country to shift for himself, thus eliminating the possibility of continuing his low stock."

The speaker also related incidents from his five-week trip inland with his brother and his daughter. All traveling was done on foot, with natives carrying the equipment.

Further observations on the natives made by Dr. Oberly include the fact that they are perfectly able of getting along in their native environment; that their moral code is of the strictest; that they are very religious in their own way.

The films shown by Dr. Oberly revealed many of the habits and customs of the natives and the pictures enabled the service clubs' members to see very clearly the conditions of this section of Africa.

Preceding the main address, Mr. Braden, assistant director of Senior Scouting of National Headquarters, gave a brief talk on the "Value of Scouting" and he pointed out that one of the best reasons for scouting is that it gives the boy an outlet to express himself.

Following this talk County Scout Executive William Livermore presented one film of moving pictures on the activities at Camp Buccoo. The pictures showed the development of the camp and its great possibilities in filling a need of the boys of this section who are scouts.

Immediately after the dinner, which was served at 6.15, Percy Ford led in a period of group singing, assisted by Keith Rosser at the piano.

"IN CASE OF WAR"

There is an old story of a farmer who thought he had made a wonderful discovery. He boasted of it to his neighbors. He had taught his cow to eat sawdust. But just as the cow "got used to it," she died!

Had the poor cow lived in Germany at the present day, she might not only have become fond of her sawdust diet, she might have thrived on it.

A German scientist has been in this country for several weeks proudly telling that the most recent achievement of German science is making a not very sweet sugar from wood fiber. The best that is claimed for it is that "in case of war" it will enable Germany to have a tolerable food supply. Scientists have been working 20 years on this problem. The German people suffered terribly during the World War trying to nourish themselves on various "ersatz" products of German science.

If the wisdom and skill of this world could be directed into paths of peace much more could be accomplished. There is no shortage of sugar, and the production could be increased enormously if demand encouraged it. Every people have their peculiar adaptability and their peculiar resources. The Germans are ingeniously skillful in many inventions.

THEY MARCH AGAIN

The other day a few hundred old soldiers—very old soldiers, indeed—marched bravely, with none too certain step, along Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington. A few hundred more, unable to march, rode in automobiles. These were the last of many thousands whose youthful, martial steps echoed along the same thoroughfare 71 years ago.

The parade of 1865 was the triumphal return of victors from the field of battle. The parade of 1936 was the triumphal gesture of valorous old men who are holding the last barricade against the forces of time and age.

The years happily have carried away the hatred and bitterness of the fratricidal quarrel which was terminated by the victory of 1865. But the years can not carry away memories of the valor of Americans, North and South, who fought for the right as they saw the right. A reunited nation rightly joined in homage to the intrepid few hundred who marched down Pennsylvania Avenue.

By the time the bystander is proved innocent in Spain, his interest in the matter has evaporated.

What becomes of a Spanish money-changer, when the artillery removes the temple?

It's O. K. for Spain to quarrel over a redistribution of wealth, but why destroy the corpus delicti?

POCKETBOOK FACTS ABOUT YOUR TAXES

Average Man Suffers Most

From the testimony of spokesmen for the Roosevelt administration may be obtained proof that the tax burden of the average man under the New Deal has increased proportionately more than that of the wealthy.

Robert Jackson, Assistant General Counsel of the Treasury Department, told the Senate Finance Committee during the consideration of the Revenue Act of 1935:

"In 1930, we find that those taxes bearing most heavily on the well-to-do contributed . . . 68.2 per cent of its (the Federal Government's) total internal revenue and customs receipts, while miscellaneous taxes and customs receipts, bearing most heavily upon the consumer, contributed . . . 31.8 per cent of such receipts."

"In 1936 the taxes based on ability to pay contributed 38.7 per cent of the internal revenue and customs receipts . . . there has been an increase in the proportion of revenues contributed by taxes on consumption to 61.3 (per cent)."

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD—These Changing Scenes—in a set representing a crude mountain courtroom, they are recreating headlines again at Warner Brothers.

The picture is called "Mountain Justice" and the characters are avowedly fictional. But even the casual newspaper reader will identify the plight of red-headed Josephine Hutchinson with that of the southern girl, Virginia Maxwell, who was recently tried for slaying her father with a high-heeled shoe.

Director Michael Curtiz has not yet reached the murder trial in the scene we watch. This is a preliminary court procedure to illustrate the prejudice of hill-billy juries.

George Brent, the young attorney for an eastern power company, is trying to get the court to hold Robert Barrat, a mountaineer, and Josephine Hutchinson's father, for an attack made upon a power company employee.

Even the physical arrangement of this courtroom is different from the metropolitan variety. The jury sits in front of the judge facing the crowd. The witness sits in front of the jury.

In his trim city clothes, Brent seems what he is, a man from another world. The action of the scene emphasizes this. Robert McWade, defense counsel for the mountaineer, takes bites from an apple as he harangues the jury:

"The only neighborly thing you can do is to acquit this old friend of yours."

Two of the jury are smoking pipes. Others are chewing tobacco. A dog is walking up and down the aisle of the courtroom.

It is perfectly evident that Brent hasn't a chance to win his case—even when he traps the accused man into a virtual admission of the attack.

"I hope you are not questioning the fairness of this court," the judge draws a warning.

"Your honor has a right to hope," is Brent's cynical reply.

"The Maid of Salem," over at Paramount, is another tale of prejudice, plus mass hysteria. It deals with the last trial for witchcraft in this country. Up until November, 1692, 18 witches had been hung in Salem and one pressed to death. Claudette Colbert is supposed to be the final victim of this cruel persecution.

We watch Director Frank Lloyd shoot a scene showing a typical case of the flimsy grounds upon which accusations of witchcraft were brought.

Malicious children were often responsible.

Bonita Granville plays one of these in the film. It is a role very similar to the one she had in "These Three". She pretends to have a fit and works her frightened elders up into a fury of revenge.

At the height of the take, Bonita Granville suddenly relaxes and crawls out of de Cordova's arms. "Cut!" yells Director Lloyd.

"What's the matter, dear?" "I'm sorry," apologizes Bonita, "but my throat is so dry I can't scream again without a drink of water."

Standing there on the set, dripping, Miss Sondergaard and Stephens exchange a smile. Then they try to wipe some of the water off them with a towel.

Summer vacation is over for Freddie Bartholomew, like the other kids of the land. Only he learns his lessons under difficulties never dreamed of by the average schoolboy.

We find him on a movie set, poring over his books.

A few feet away, Director Victor Fleming is shooting a scene for "Captains Courageous" with another child actor, Billy Burdud. The noises of picture making go on as usual, but Freddie doesn't seem to hear them.

He is sitting at a table with his stand-in, Ray Sperry. Miss Mary Murphy, their teacher, is overseeing their work.

She tells us the studio has to allow Freddie three hours a day for his studies. But not consecutive hours. Some times, he works at his lessons for 45 minutes at a time.

Again, it may be only eight. You can imagine the power of concentration this requires.

We ask Freddie if it doesn't bother him, doing his school work little bits at a time.

"Oh no," he says brightly, "I have grown quite used to it."

As we turn to go, he hops to his feet and stands politely. But before we have rounded the corner of the set, his head is bent over his books again. He has become completely unaware of his surroundings.

"THE BIG FOUR" by Agatha Christie

"What are we going to do now?" I asked.

"No, Hastings. We are about to leave Paris for England."

"What?"

"We will pack our effects, have lunch, and drive to the Gare du Nord."

"But the radium?"

"I said we were going to leave for England—I did not say we were going to arrive there. Reflect a moment, Hastings. It is quite certain that we are being watched and followed. Our enemies must believe that we are going back to England, and they certainly will not believe that unless they see us get on board the train and start."

"Do you mean we are to slip off again at the last minute?"

"No, Hastings. Our enemies will be satisfied with nothing less than a bona fide departure."

"But the train doesn't stop until Calais?"

"It will stop if it is paid to do so."

"Oh, come now, Poirot—surely you can't pay an express to stop—they'd refuse."

"My dear friend, have you never remarked the little hand—the emergency cord—penalty for improper use, 100 francs, I think?"

"Oh! you are going to pull that?"

"Or rather a friend of mine, Pierre Combeau, will do so. Then, while he is arguing with the guard, and making a big scene, and all the train is agog with interest, you and I will fade quietly away."

We duly carried out Poirot's plan. Pierre Combeau, an old enemy of Poirot's, and who evidently knew my little friend's methods pretty well, fell in with the arrangements. The communication cord was pulled just as we got to the outskirts of Paris. Combeau "made a scene" in the most approved French fashion and Poirot and I were able to leave the train without any one being interested in our departure. Our first proceeding was to make a considerable change in our appearance. Poirot had brought the materials for this with him in a small case. Two loafers in dirty blue blouses were the result. We had dinner in an obscure hostelry, and started back to Paris afterwards.

It was close on eleven o'clock when we found ourselves once more in the neighbourhood of Madame Olivier's villa. We looked up and down the way. The whole place appeared to be perfectly deserted. One thing we could be quite certain of, no one was following us.

"I do not expect them to be here yet," whispered Poirot to me. "Possibly they may not come until tomorrow night, but they know perfectly well that there are only two nights on which the radium will be there."

Very cautiously we turned the key in the garden door. It opened noiselessly and we stepped into the garden.

And then, with complete unexpectedness, the blow fell. In a minute we were surrounded, gagged and bound. At least ten men must have been waiting for us. Resistance was useless. Like two helpless bundles we were lifted up and carried along. To my intense astonishment, they took us towards the house and not away from it. With a key they opened the door into the laboratory and carried us into it. One of the men stepped down before the big safe. The door of it swung open. I felt an unpleasant sensation down my spine. Were they going to bundle into it, and leave us there to asphyxiate slowly?

However, to my amazement, I saw that from the inside of the safe steps led down beneath the floor. We were thrust down this narrow way and eventually came out into a big subterranean chamber. A woman stood there, tall and imposing, with a black velvet mask covering her face. She was clearly in command of the situation by her gestures of authority. The men slung us down on the floor and left us—alone with the mysterious creature in the mask. I had no doubt who she was. This was the unknown Frenchwoman—Number Three of the Big Four.

She knelt down beside us and removed the gags, but left us bound, then rising and facing us, with a sudden swift gesture she removed her mask.

"It was Madame Olivier!"

"M. Poirot," she said, in a low, mocking tone. "The great, the wonderful, the unique M. Poirot. I sent a warning to you yesterday morning. You chose to disregard it—you thought you could pit your wits against US. And now, you are here!"

There was a cold malignity about her that froze me to the marrow. It was so at variance with the burning fire of her eyes. She was mad—mad with the madness of genius!

Poirot said nothing. His jaw had dropped, and he was staring at her.

"Well," she said softly, "this is the end. We cannot permit our plans to be interfered with. Have you any last request to make?"

Never before, or since, have I felt so near death. Poirot was magnificent. He neither flinched nor paled, just stared at her with unabated interest.

"Your psychology interests me enormously, madame," he said quietly. "It is a pity that I have so short a time to devote to studying it. Yes, I have a request to make. A condemned man is always allowed a last smoke, I believe. I have my cigarette case on me. If you would permit—"

He looked down at his bonds.

"Ah, yes!" she laughed. "You would like me to untie your hands, would you not? You are clever, M. Hercule Poirot. I know that. I shall not untie your hands—but I will find you a cigarette."

She knelt down by him, extracted his cigarette case, took out a cigarette, and placed it between his lips.

"And now a match," she said, rising.

"It is not necessary, madame." Something in his voice startled me. She, too, was arrested.

"Do not move, I pray of you, madame. You will regret it if you do. Are you acquainted at all with the properties of curare? The South American Indians use it as an arrow poison. A scratch with it means death. Some tribes use a little blow-dry. I, too, have a little blow-dry like a cigarette. I have only to blow . . . Ah! you start. Do not move, madame. The mechanism of this cigarette is most ingenious. One blow—and a tiny dart resembling a fishbone flies through the air—to find its mark. You do not wish to die, madame. Therefore, I beg of you, release my friend Hastings from his bonds. I cannot use my hands, but I can turn my head—so—you are still covered, madame. Make no mistake, I beg of you."

Slowly, with shaking hands, and rage and hate convulsing her face, she bent down and did his bidding. I was free. Poirot's voice gave me instructions.

"Your hands will now do for the lady, Hastings. That night, is she securely fastened? Then release me, I pray of you. It is a fortunate circumstance she sent away her henchmen. With a little luck we may hope to find the way out unobstructed."

In another minute, Poirot stood by my side. He bowed to the lady. "Hercule Poirot is not killed so easily, madame. I wish you good-night."

She prevented her from replying, but the murderous gleam in her eyes frightened me. I hoped devoutly that we should never fall into her power again.

Three minutes later we were outside the villa, and hurriedly traversing the garden. The road outside was deserted, and we were soon clear of the neighbourhood.

Then Poirot broke out.

"I deserve all that that woman said to me. I am a triple imbecile, a miserable animal, thirty-six times an idiot. I was proud of myself for not falling into their trap. And it was not even meant as a trap—except exactly in the way in which I fell into it. They knew I would see through it—they counted on my seeing through it. This explains all—the case with which they surrendered Halliday—everything. Madame Olivier was the ruling spirit—Vera Rossakoff only her lieutenant. Madame needed Halliday's ideas—she herself had the necessary genius to supply the gaps that perplexed him. Yes, Hastings, we know now who Number Three is—the woman who is probably the greatest scientist in the world! Think of it. The brain of the East, the science of the West—and two others whose identities we do not yet know. But we must find out. To-morrow we will return to London and set about it."

"You are not going to denounce Madame Olivier to the police?"

"I should not be believed. That woman is one of the idols of France. And we can prove nothing. We are lucky if she does not denounce us."

"What?"

"Think of it. We are found at night upon the premises with keys in our possession which she will swear she never gave us. She surrounds us at the safe, and we gag and bind her and make away. Have no illusions, Hastings. The boot is not upon the right leg—is that how you say it?"

After our adventure in the villa at Passy, we returned post haste to London. Several letters were awaiting Poirot. He read one of them with a curious smile, and then handed it to me.

"Read this, mon ami."

I turned first to the signature, "Abe Ryland," and recalled Poirot's words: "The richest man in the world." Mr. Ryland's letter was curt and incisive. He expressed himself as profoundly dissatisfied with the reasons Poirot had given for withdrawing from the South American proposition at the last moment.

"This gives one something to think, does it not?" said Poirot.

"I suppose it's only natural he should be a bit ratty."

"No, no, you comprehend not. Remember the words of Mayerling, the man who took refuge here—only to die by the hands of his enemies. Number Two is represented by an S with two lines through it—the sign for a dollar, also by two stripes and a star. It may be conjectured therefore that he is an American subject, and that he represents the power of wealth. Add to those words the fact that Ryland offered me a huge sum to tempt me out of England—and—and what about it, Hastings?"

The advertisements in this paper are guide-posts to the best values in town. If they weren't the best values in town, by any chance, the advertisers would be foolish indeed to call your attention to them. Because no advertiser can afford to focus upon a fault!

Just as you consult a road-map before taking a tour in your car; just as you pore over a bill-of-fare before ordering lunch or dinner; just as you read reams of booklets and folders before starting out on a cruise—read the advertisements before going downtown into the shopping traffic.

Advertisements are advance news of all that's newest and best in merchandise and service. They show you, in the quiet and comfort of your home, what you may expect when you sally forth into the market-places. You can check the items that interest you, and "chuck" those that don't. Lt. Col. Yague Tells Of His Great Victory

I asked him what he had found when he arrived. "Oh, we only found five Whites killed by the Reds. There were two priests, one banker and his son and another fellow. Very small murder list as a matter of fact. Usually find many more. Back there in Almedralejo when we finally got in I saw forty-two incinerated corpses of Whites, some of them in the jail, some in the church and some in the convent."

The Lieutenant Colonel asked us to have a beer, but we begged for water. They say the water around these parts is not too good for drinking but I have drunk not less than two gallons today and am still thirsty.

About this time five big shining new French bombing airplanes came over and gave us a message. They had a broad red band, the first clear insignia of the Madrid party that I had seen. Their bombs struck somewhere over by Oropesa.

We bade goodbye to Lieutenant Colonel Asensio, promising to be back soon, and set out for Oropesa to get there before dark. It is distinctly inadvisable to travel in the war zone after dark. We ran into one good proof of that just up the road where we met two automobiles full of officers of the Legion, very, very angry. They had just been fired upon by their own outposts because they had failed to stop fast enough when challenged on the road. Nobody was hurt, but we took the lesson and stopped very quickly whenever a sentry raised his hand.

We had two Legionnaires with us and whenever we passed any peasants our Legionnaires jumped out to interrogate them. The peasants have a difficult time for they don't quite know yet which salute to give, the Fascist salute of the upraised open right hand or the Red salute of the clenched fist.

Along came one little family group of father, mother and two children aged about ten to twelve. The father and mother gave the proper Fascist salute, but the children, who had not been apprised of the fact that politics had changed within the last twelve hours in their part of the country, naively gave us the clenched fist.

Father and mother jumped off their mules and chastized the bewildered children while the Legionnaires chuckled. They know perfectly well what the value of the Fascist salute is from a population which just a few hours ago was giving the Red salute with the same fervor.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing
For International News Service

HOLLYWOOD — (INS)—All aboard the fashion express! What is the smart and practical garb for traveling? There's the poser that's tossed at me from all sides by Hollywood ladies who are off to New York for the opening of the Broadway season and chic young things bound for college.

For a brief dash east upon the completion of "The Making of O'Malley" with Pat O'Brien, Frieda Inescort has chosen a three-piece ensemble that will make her feminine travelling companions die of envy because they hadn't thought of it first. The suit of wine wool has a double-breasted jacket that is belted and has two rows of buttons like a band major's. A hand-blocked ascot tucked in at the neck eliminates the necessity for a blouse. Over the suit goes a full-length matching coat in the Chesterfield style with belted back and deep patch pockets. A shallow-crowned felt is most practical for train travel because a bit of crushing won't hurt it.

Jane Wyman, who plots a trip by boat, lauds velveteen. Keep your eye on Jane. Among the younger players there is none who has quite the flair for clothes as this little singer. In this case she hopes to sail out on the blue Pacific in grey velveteen made on princess lines. A brief bolero of royal blue velveteen adds a bright touch and tiny matching blue buttons line themselves down the front. When the sea-breeze does nip-ups, she has a full length cape of grey velveteen with very broad shoulders and Eskimo cap attached to save the day.

Trailers, too, come into the travel limelight this year. When Errol Flynn finishes "The Green Light," he and his wife, Lili Damita, will go on a nomad trailer trip about the country. This set me to thinking about the ideal trailer costume.

WEDDING CAKES FOR HAPPINESS

The bride must have a wedding cake, be it simple or elaborate. The cake may be either all white or a fruit mixture according to personal preference. The wedding cake of today may be decorated in color but white frosting holds the place of honor.

I am sketching one which will feature copper brown culottes of firm wool jersey, a shirtmaker blouse in rust and a tri-corner Paisley scarf, to the head to be caught by two little

The high-crowned brimless hat must be antelope, made like a stocking cap with the soft crown rolled down close to the head to be caught by two little balls in rust and brown. . . . A matching suede jacket for cool days.

NEW CURTAINS AND DRAPIERIES FOR THE WINDOW

The curtains or overcurtains may need replacing or the windows may be those of a new home being curtained for the first time. In either case, there are some set rules that if followed, will give to a room spaciousness as well as lend a decorative note.

When considering windows, keep in mind that windows must admit light and air if they serve their purpose. The architectural type of the house should be considered; also the furnishings are most important.

Simple "glass curtains" are in keeping with most types of architecture. Color and originality may be brought into a room through the use of distinctive types of overcurtains. The stores today are showing novelties for "glass curtains" of marquisette, celanese, and a ratine weave that is new and particularly attractive.

Curtains should be made of the best of materials. It is no economy to try and save here for poor materials will not hold their shape or wear well, yet just as much time and labor have been spent in making them, as would be needed for the better kind. It is well to cut off the selvage as it eliminates the possibility of curtains pulling when they are laundered. Regardless of the size of the window, a pair of curtains should be used. Only in this way will the window be accessible for light and air and give softness to the room. A full width of material should be used for each curtain unless the window is exceptionally small. In this case, the material may be split and hemmed, a narrow hem to the outside, the wider hem for the border.

Regular use of the Courier Classified column is economical and profitable.

Resigns As Member Of Bensalem School Board

William Abel was elected to fill the vacant office of vice-president.

All other members of the board were present, with George Cragg, president, in the chair. Important committee reports were heard and general progress of the schools was discussed.

A report from Charles Meisinger, Treviso, director of the high school cafeteria, indicated that for the first month of school the cafeteria has fed more pupils than ever before in its history.

A report of the census enumeration conducted during the Summer revealed that there were 1137 students enrolled in the schools.

Charles Wenner reported that more than $2,000 in taxes have been collected this year, than during the same period last year. The treasurer's report, also, was otherwise favorable.

It was also announced at the meeting that a three-year contract has been made with Mr. Bushnell, Treviso, to use his buses for student transportation. Mr. Bushnell has put on one new bus this year. The bus, larger in size than those employed in the past, is of the all-steel body type.

Llewellyn Williams, Cornwells Heights, secretary of the board, and also chairman of the purchasing committee, reported that the committee had approved bills for general school supplies, as well as janitor's supplies and medical and nursing supplies.

Oscar Schrieber, chairman of the building and grounds committee reported that all school buildings are in fine shape and that all repairs started during the Summer have been completed.

Superintendent of School S. K. Faust reported on the six new teachers. He also stated that the new courses at the junior high school in Treviso are working out very well.

FASHION PARADE

By ORRY-KELLY

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 2.—(INS)—Into the thick of the fashion promenade now comes laces . . . fragile and bulky, soft and stiff, for trimming and entire dresses.

Lace usually slips into the fashion picture with the early Spring flowers, but last Spring saw it used only sparingly. In the Fall it usually goes trailing away, but paradoxically, this year lace is just coming in with the falling leaves.

The only reason we can see for this sudden flare-up at such an unusual time of the year is the large number of costume pictures recently sent out from Hollywood to all corners of the earth. Those sumptuous frocks in "Anthony Adverse," for instance, made folks lace-conscious. Even the nighties in those by-gone periods brought to life on the screen were so rich in lace that Anita Louise included one she wore in the picture in her own personal wardrobe. She nipped up the very low neckline a bit and is wearing the erstwhile nightgown as a hostess gown.

At the moment I am sketching a lace dress which Kay Francis may wear in her forthcoming picture, "Another Dawn." It will be made of deep bands of dark-hued Chantilly with a skirt that measures yards and yards around. If the dress is made up in Coronation blue which has a distinct purplish cast, the narrow velvet girdle will be rose.

Black velvet with an Elizabethan collar of heavy Holland lace of starched stiffness will be the theme of a gown Jean Muir intends to incorporate in her personal wardrobe.

Beige is a color peculiarly adaptable to lace and since it is also one of the prime shades of autumn there will be a great deal of this creamy lace. Carol Hughes wears a beige lace foundation and over it goes the sheerest of georgette dinner gowns in the same shade. The cobwebby lines of the lace are discernible beneath to trace a delicate pattern. Lace camisole tops to silk slips will be worn under chiffons and other transparent silks as they were in the pre-war days. Lace jabots are again popular to brighten tailored suits and every girl should have plenty of extra lace collars to add that feminine touch to plain dresses.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S MESSAGE

AT PITTSBURGH, PA.

(BEFORE HE WAS ELECTED PRESIDENT, IN 1932)

"We all know that our own family credit depends in large part on the stability of the credit of the United States.

"The credit of the family depends chiefly on whether that family is living within its income. And this is so of the nation. If the nation is living within its income, its credit is good.

"But if, like a spendthrift, it throws discretion to the winds, is willing to make no sacrifice at all in spending, extends its taxing to the limit of the people's power to pay and continues to pile up deficits, it is on the road to bankruptcy.

"FOR OVER TWO YEARS OUR FEDERAL GOVERNMENT HAS EXPERIENCED UNPRECEDENTED DEFICITS, IN SPITE OF INCREASED TAXES.

"Taxes are paid in the sweat of every man who labors, because they are a burden on production and can be paid only by production . . . Our workers may never see a tax bill, but they pay in deductions from wages, in increased cost of what they buy, or (as now) in broad cessation of employment.

"Our Federal extravagance and improvidence bear a double evil; first, our people and our business cannot carry its excessive burdens of taxation; second, our credit structure is impaired by the unorthodox Federal financing made necessary by the unprecedented magnitude of these deficits.

"There is strong indication that we are in for another staggering deficit.

"I REGARD REDUCTION IN FEDERAL SPENDING AS ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT ISSUES OF THIS CAMPAIGN. IN MY OPINION IT IS THE MOST DIRECT AND EFFECTIVE CONTRIBUTION THAT GOVERNMENT CAN MAKE TO BUSINESS.

"Would it not be infinitely better to clear this whole subject of obscurity—to present the facts squarely to the Congress and the people of the United States and secure the one sound foundation of permanent economic recovery—a complete and honest balance of the Federal budget?"

EACH OF THOSE STATEMENTS WAS MADE BY MR. ROOSEVELT IN PITTSBURGH, PA.—NOT AS PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, BUT WHEN HE WAS A CANDIDATE, ASKING THE PEOPLE TO ELECT HIM BECAUSE OF THOSE VIEWS. THE DATE WAS OCTOBER 19, 1932. AND HE ADDED:

"OUR PEOPLE HAVE A RIGHT AND A DUTY TO PLACE IN RETIREMENT THOSE WHO CONCEAL REALITIES AND ABUSE CONFIDENCE."

At Harvard University just a few days ago (September 18th) President Roosevelt pictured himself as one—

"To carry the torch of truth.
The truth is great and will prevail."

ARE HIS PROMISES OF TODAY WORTH ANY MORE THAN THEY WERE IN 1932?

HOME TOWN BOYS AMAZE FANS BY THEIR PLAYING

Bristol fans who witnessed the Bristol Tornadoes in action last week were amazed at the showing of a few of the home town boys made against Holmesburg. Several of the localites even outshone the playing of the outside footballers on the local eleven.

Leading the Bristolites was Coach "Gig" Dougherty who quarterbacked the Tornadoes to a deadlock. At all times the field generalship of Dougherty was unquestioned and he carried the pigskin several times for good gains. In the line, "Socks" Seneca and "Flop" Flatch stood out. These youths formed the stonewall which the Holmesburg team could not penetrate.

"Jupes" Zeffries, "Hank" Neindorff, Benny Carp, Gorilla Wilson, Bobby Russ, Joe Roe, "Rolls" McLaughlin, Russ Unruh, and Jimmy Lake played their share of the contest and all were impressive in their debut into professional football.

The resident boys will again be seen in action this week-end when the Bristol team meets the Trenton-Roebling Blue Centers, one of the fastest elevens in the state of New Jersey. The Blue Centers will be led by "Jake" Weller, former end of the Pittsburgh University.

Arrangements are now completed for the seating situation and everyone who attends the game will be able to sit comfortably. Two thousand seats will be arranged on the sidelines, according to manager Joe Meyers.

CROYDON

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Brown on Tuesday evening gave a party in honor of their daughter Edna's 15th birthday. Miss Edna was hostess to the eighth grade of which she is a scholar, and a delightful evening with games and music and a delicious repast were enjoyed.

On Monday night the Auxiliary of Croydon Fire Co. will hold a meeting. The subject of maintaining electric lights on State Road and how to raise money for such will be discussed. All women of Croydon are invited to attend and express their views.

Later there will be a meeting for the interested public.

A very enjoyable evening was spent at the Croydon Fire House Tuesday evening by the firemen and their friends.

Hold Rioters in Jail

Reading, Oct. 2.—Four of the eighteen persons arrested during the strike riot that resulted in injuries to two score workers, sympathizers and police, outside the Berkshire Knitting Mills, were held today in $2,500 bail each. Nine others were assessed fines ranging from $7.25 to $27.25 for their part in the wild affray.

Three of the injured, State Police Sergeant John M. Wooster, of Tower City; Donald McCarragher, 18, and M. Earl Schlegel, 25, both of Reading, were in a serious condition in a local hospital.

Comparatively quiet prevailed in the vicinity of the mill as non-striking operators reported for work with 70 state policemen, armed with riot sticks, maintaining order.

Among those injured in last midnight's disturbance was Trooper Marshall Wilhelm, son of Cecil Wilhelm, Deputy Superintendent of the State Police, who was struck in the back by a rock and hurled from his horse. He was rescued from the rescuers from the crowd by other mounted policemen.

Although strikers say that only 10% of the workers went through the picket line, Hugo Hemmerich, general manager of the mill, declared the majority of the employees were at work and that the plant will remain open.

MOST DANGEROUS DRIVING PERIOD OF THE YEAR IS NOW APPROACHING

When the leaves turn brown, the accident curve turns upward and the nation is now on the eve of the most dangerous driving period of the year, according to Frank E. Ballantyne, General Manager of the Automobile Club of Philadelphia, AAA.

"It is generally assumed," said Mr. Ballantyne, "that the greatest number of accidents occur in the summer months, but this assumption is not correct. From the annual low point in February, the accident trend starts upward, rising steadily during the height of the touring season.

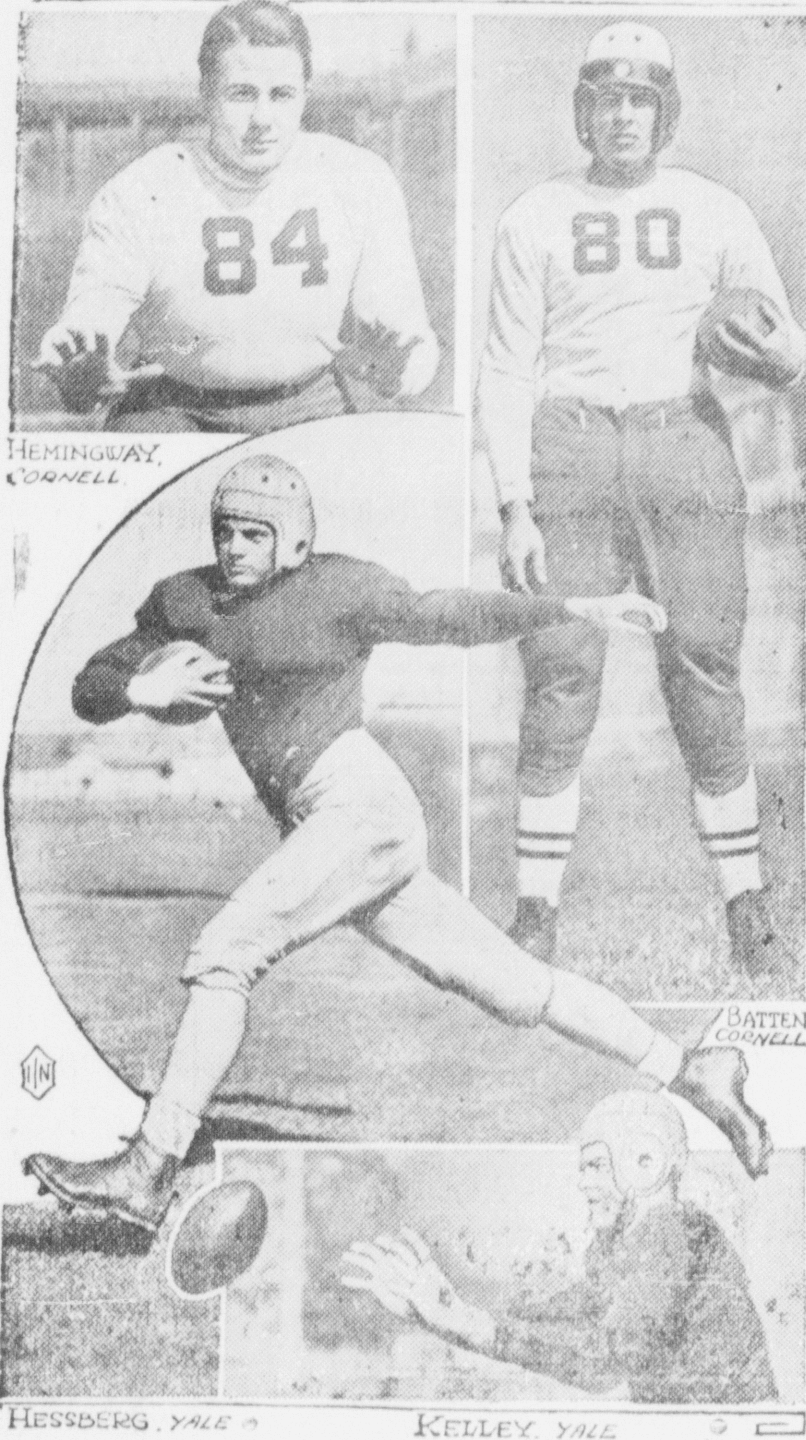

"However, with the ending of the vacation period, there is no reduction in accidents as might reasonably be expected; rather the fatality trend continues upward, reaching a peak in the remainder of the year.

"In relation to volume of travel, as measured by gasoline consumption, early spring and summer actually are the safest times of the year, with fall and winter showing a decidedly worse record.

"Safety experts have never completely agreed as to what is the principal cause of the rising accident trend in autumn, ascribing it to a number of reasons. However, it is generally agreed that the fewer hours of daylight and consequently increased night-driving are major contributing factors in this bad record. It is also conceded that fallen leaves on the road constitute a skidding hazard unique to the fall months.

"Whatever may be the cause, the lesson is obvious: from now until the close of the year, the motorist must exercise the maximum of caution for this is the time of the year most dangerous to the careless driver."

STARS OF CORNELL-YALE

HEMINGWAY, CORNELL. BATTEN, CORNELL. HESSBERG, YALE. KELLEY, YALE.

Under the tutelage of Carl Snavely, Cornell ran up a big score over Alfred to open the season but running up against Yale at New Haven must be considered another story. The Elis, untied this season, have slippery Al Hessberg in the backfield and Captain Larry Kelley, pass-snatching end, in there of the veterans. Captain Jack Batten, at center, leads an up-and-coming Ithaca team with giant ex-freshman Hemingway at tackle.

Thugs Get $160

Philadelphia, Oct. 2.—William F. Fetter, Chester, a building contractor, today was slugged on the head outside his home, robbed of $160 and driven in his own automobile by six armed thugs. The victim was hurt from the machine in the Eastwick section. Two of the men were masked.

Hindenburg Speeded Up

By Dorothy Kilgallen
(L. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright by L. N. S.)

Aboard the Dirigible Hindenburg at Sea.—Goaded by three world gliders who fear that this big Zeppelin won't arrive at the Frankfurt landing field in time for us to catch the plane for Rome, Captain Max Pruss today bid the order to speed up the Hindenburg's four great Diesel motors. Instantly the smooth baritone of the quartet smoothed into a tenor hum, and although, as far as I am concerned the Hindenburg still feels motionless, it has speeded up the craft.

Moreover, Captain Pruss, who is either a very splendid man or could not stand being pestered, kept the ship on a more southerly course than she has ever followed, to gain the advantage of the winds.

EDGELY

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Palowicz and family spent the week-end in Brooklyn, N. Y., visiting Mr. and Mrs. Nick Oslack.

To Perform Second Autopsy

Uniontown, Oct. 2.—The body of Frank C. Monaghan was taken from its grave today and brought back to Uniontown for a second autopsy, as Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, special prosecutor, speeded up his special investigation of charges the 54-year-old hotel keeper met his death under brutal police "third degree."

Smith Comes Out For Landon; Hits New Deal

hard as man could for the labor laws. I took pounds off myself talking before every audience that I could bring in front of my voice. And I stand today just exactly where I stood then.

"Every decision I had to make in my executive capacity has been made in the interest of the men working under me. I make no apology for being in business. There's nothing wrong in being in business. In the last analysis, we have to look to the business-men of this nation if we are going to have a permanent solution of the unemployment situation.

"But down in Washington... the bills were drawn by the Brain Trust in the White House and then were sent down to the Congress with the command, 'they must go.' Just consider for a moment the independence of the legislative branch of our Government. They are told what they must do.

"If the AAA, the NRA, and the Guffey Coal Bill were good why didn't the New Deal submit a constitutional amendment so they could be legally enacted.

"I asked the question and I'll answer it myself. The answer is that the New Deal was entirely unwilling to meet the question of State's rights.

"Let it be noted for the record that the present Chief Executive wherever he earned a dollar outside of his salary in the executive mansion, earned it as a corporation lawyer in the Wall Street District.

"They say Al has a grudge.

"I have no grudge. I fought with the New Deal because they fooled me. They fooled the party. As far as the President himself is concerned I have

Buckeye and Violet Stars in Opener

New York University's Violets travel to Columbus, Ohio, to tackle the powerful Buckeyes who put Ohio State University at the head of the list of 1935's wonder teams. Dye and McDonald are vying for the Buckeye signalling job with Dye, the veteran, leading. Hammick is 230 pounds of Ohio tackle who is tough to handle. N. Y. U. is depending on the veterans, Hersch, at center, and Savarese in the backfield to put spark and coordination in an untied eleven.

Gaucha to Meet Brown Bomber

George Brescia, Argentine heavy-weight, is practicing up on his Sunday punch for his bout with Joe Louis at New York. The Argentine giant is tuning up at his Summit, N. J., training camp.

"Let's have one of them. United States Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, said: 'The New Deal taken all in all is not only a mistake, it is a disgrace to the nation.'

"I regard Senator Glass as one of the leading Democrats of this country.

"What about all the men that started out with the New Deal and couldn't last any longer. There's a long list of them and it would take me a long while. Read what Jim Warburg said and he was a trusted financial adviser. And above all things be sure to read what Jim Douglas said, who was the director of the budget.

"Well, we're coming near the end of the radio time. Let me say this. If the Administration in Washington, no matter what it desires to call it, had lived up to its platform in 1932 and if it had lived true to the principles of Jefferson, if the President himself had made good on his promises I wouldn't be on this platform tonight.

"There would be no Coalition of American Women opposing the national Administration. I know where I would be. I would be at the National Democratic Committee ready to battle. 'Newton Baker, the Secretary of War in the Cabinet of President Wilson, recently delivered a speech before the American Legion and he said the proudest boast of the ancient world was 'I am a Roman citizen.' In this troubled world today let it be our proud boast. I am an American citizen. America, you have been a tender friend to me. You have been God's gift of opportunity to me. And to be an American is to be greater than a king. And I'm an American before I'm a Democrat, before I'm a Republican, before I am anything.

"And I have never in long public career found fault with anything unless I was ready to suggest a remedy. I firmly believe that the remedy for all the ills that we are suffering from today is the election of Alfred M. Landon."
